Senator Edwards thought that the bill cught to pass, because the leople and already waited six years for a convention and ought to have it. He praised the bill because it allowed women to be voted for as delegates, and he hoped that some women would be chosen to the Convention.

Senator O Combort thought that the Sanatorial-district plan would increase the Democratic representation. He objected to the six delegates assigned to parties nominating six delegates assigned to parties nominating by certificate a sensor well and the tatal defect in the bill was that it did not conform to the provisions of the Constitution, which provided that every elector should have the right to vote for all officers elected by the people. He offered an amendment providing for the election of 160 delegates, 128 by districts and 32 at large.

Senator Smith's amendment was lost by a vote of 8 aves to 10 mays.
